

SILENT SUFFERERS.
 Why do not Like to Tell a Doctor
 the Details of Their Private Ills.

reason why so many women suffer from the effects of the venereal disease and their sexual system is that they cannot bear to brood the subject upon their minds. The physician can blame a model, sensitive girl for this reticence. It is unnecessary. It is a woman's duty, however, for a woman to tell all about her most intimate feelings to Mr. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass. Misses were obliged to write to him and confide in his skill. He has never charged, and that advice is the greatest experience ever possessed by a man. He has treated over twenty-three years, and thousands upon thousands. Why suffer in silence any longer, Miss? Write to him telling everything, like Mrs. Pinkham. We guarantee to Mrs. Pinkham's advice; here is a rest to relief—at last in despair she writes in a postscript, sympathetic and interested like us:

"My back and hips, and I felt so tired from the long hours I had to work in my head by spells that it seemed from my shoulders to my feet and from my head to my feet, that I could not sleep. I wrote you a long reply and followed her advice, and she was so much in my mind, I never felt that I went doing with Mr. Pinkham. I have never felt any more tired."

She Missed Him. In a poor woman who kept a shop in a north-village, and who was troubled with a cough, one could scarcely be considered a credit to the family, one day her husband flew through the sudden demise of her spouse. A lady, who frequently made her year lunches at the shop, called to see her to tell her sympathy. "How—how kind of the man's death must be a certain source of relief, as the wife had often mentioned his violent coughing," said the lady. "Quite prepared for the usual way in which the wife took her bereavement and the lady replied, "I am sure, your husband."
